There is evidence that it may improve your sexual performance. Health Benefits A recent study published in The Journal of Sexual Medicine found that men who ate chocolate every day improved their sexual performance when they ejaculated. They attributed this improvement to chocolate's flavonoids, which protect the blood vessels and improve blood flow to the genitals. Conveniently, chocolate cravings are a sign that your body may be low on a substance called serotonin. This is because a protein called tryptophan is required to convert into serotonin. So, you might say that eating chocolate can stimulate the production of serotonin, which improves the blood flow to the genitals and helps with orgasm. Chocolate also contains antioxidants that can protect the lining of the arteries, so it may improve blood flow to the penis and relaxes blood vessels. Flexibility The other advantage to eating chocolate is that it can improve your flexibility. In fact, one study published in The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition found that people who ate 200 grams of chocolate every day increased their range of motion by 4%. That may not sound like a lot, but a one-point increase in range of motion can improve muscle strength. I have been looking for a way to add a tag via Html.Partial. I'm trying to do:

@Html.Partial("_FormSection") It's a simple section that basically says: //@form.Id How can I create a partial view that has nothing but that form element that I want to insert in? Thank you. A: If it's a HtmlHelper then you can use the FormCollection for this. @Html.Partial("_FormSection", Model.FormData); _FormSection.cshtml //@form.Id If you want to insert the data as plain text then you can do this in the partial view: @Model.FormData So if you were using a Model then you'd need to include the form data as well.
