softwareCast iron fryers have been used for cooking food for many years. A typical fryer has a bottom vessel having a lower end in which a heating element is positioned. Oil is typically heated in the fryer and the heated oil is supplied through an opening in the side of the fryer to a food receptacle such as a basket or a vat. The fryer also has a grate or perforated plate to support food items in the receptacle and for directing heated oil onto the food items. The food items are often immersed in the heated oil for cooking. A typical commercially-available fryer is described in U.S. Pat. No. 6,761,005, the disclosure of which is incorporated herein by reference. This patent describes a fryer having a base member that forms a lower chamber. The base member supports a heating element, a means to circulate heated oil through the heating element and food receptacle, and a grate. The base member includes a series of recesses that define the lower chamber. The fryer has a cover member for enclosing the base member and for mounting a food receptacle on the base member. The fryer also includes a pump for pumping oil through the heating element, which can be raised and lowered by a means such as a pair of chains. A preferred embodiment of the fryer in U.S. Pat. No. 6,761,005 further includes a gauge for measuring the quantity of oil supplied by the pump. In this embodiment, the gauge is mounted to the pump casing and is covered by the cover member when the fryer is not in use. The present invention provides improvements in fryers, and in particular to the base member that supports the food receptacle and the grate for directing heated oil onto the food receptacle. Former President George H.W. Bush will participate in a question-and-answer session with the Bushes at the “At Home with the Bushes” book tour, which begins July 2 in St. Louis, MO, and
